

Three Generations of Romeros: Grandfather Dan, grandson Daniel, and son Daniel Romero of Arroyo Seco, New Mexico.

Photo by Geraint Smith

Columbine Hondo is our common ground.

Our family loves the outdoors and all the recreational opportunities the amazing Columbine Hondo area provides. While we like to four-wheel, which we do respectfully in designated areas during the appropriate seasons, our greater love is hiking, hunting and fishing in our beautiful, wild, mountains. Three generations of Romeros have enjoyed hiking up to Lobo Ridge via the Gavilan Trail, including grandson Daniel, who at seven hiked there with his sister, Savannah. We'd like to see these wilderness opportunities protected so that future generations can continue to see the beauty of this place and feel the energy that this area bestows on all of us. We thank Senators Bingaman and Udall for working to permanently protect Columbine Hondo as wilderness.

Help protect our wilderness, water, and heritage. www.columbinehondo.org

